Exhibit Development and Scope

The exhibit progresses chronologically from the political rise of Adolf Hitler to major accords such as the ‘Four Freedoms Speech’, ‘Declaration of St. James Palace’, ‘Atlantic Charter’ and ‘Declaration by United Nations’, in preparation for a new peace organization.

The exhibit ends with the transformation of the ‘Inter-Allied Information Office’, founded in 1940, into the ‘United Nations Information Office’ in 1942. It was the earliest embodiment of what would formally become the United Nations organization founded in San Francisco, California in 1945, nearly three years later.

Challenge

Mail related to many events and organizations is either not recorded or scarce and therefore a major acquisition challenge. The thematic approach allows some documentation through mail of the period, however official service mail of some organizations is only recorded out of period (ie. 1943) and is included as appropriate.

Condition and Rarity

Service mail is rarely pristine; creases, small tears or missing corners indicate actual transit. Rarity is determined from articles, monographs, census, exhibits, web sites and personal research. Items with interesting or unusual traits are described in bold italicized text. Key items (fewer than 10 reported/recorded) are matted in bright blue.

Personal Research

Thematic research of the time period, personalities and historical events includes little known information. Philatelic research with specialty collectors world-wide since 1975 contributed to determining material scarcity. Exhibitor contributes League of Nations and U.N. related research, articles and images to the UNPI ‘Journal’.

Philatelic Knowledge and Elements

Descriptions of items demonstrate general philatelic knowledge (rates, rarity or appropriate information). The story-line is illustrated with diverse elements to demonstrate subject details and balanced presentation.

What is not here

Mail from Churchill’s ship, H.M.S. Prince of Wales, is un-recorded (launched 19 Jan 1941, lost 10 Dec 1941). One personal registered letter (from Herataunga, 29 Nov. 1941) to the H.M.S. Prince of Wales is in private hands in New Zealand. The letter went via London to Singapore and attempted to catch up to the ship before it left Singapore for its ill-fated service with Force Z, where it was sunk by Japanese bombers and torpedo aircraft on 10 December. The cover was returned to sender in New Zealand. It’s addressed to a Surgeon Commander Francis Bernard Quinn who survived the sinking however, there is no evidence he ever received the letter.

Historical Notes

- The Allied nations referred to themselves loosely as the ‘united nations’ as early as 1941.
- Souvenir envelopes were printed by order of President Roosevelt for use by ship crews with commemorative cancellations applied after the fact. As family heirlooms, they’re difficult to find (2 examples included).
